Receipts For First Quarter Indicate Rapid Growth During the Year

Postoffice receipts in Bismarck show a marked increase for the first quarter of 1923, as compared to the same period during 1922, according to compilations made in the local office. While the increase in part is due to the legislative business, many other factors have entered into it, according to postoffice officials. A comparison of the receipts for the respective quarters of 1922 and 1923 follows:

Total $32,974.00 $40,808.22

The total receipts for the postoffice for the year 1922 were $127,480.18, and the record for the first quarter of this year gives the postoffice a fair start toward exceeding that total, Postmaster Henry T. Murphy said.

Inventive Minds Make New Jobs In Government

Washington, D. C., April 6.—Congress has authorized the Patent office at Washington to add 43 new assistant patent examiners to its force. This may be regarded as an indication of the activity of inventive minds of the country, for the examining force must try to keep abreast of the application for patents. It is not unusual for the Patent office to receive as many as 100,000 applications for patents in a single year.

FOUND IN HOSPITAL

Sitting in Boiler Room of Basement When Guard Sees Notorious Convict

Atlanta, Ga., April 6.—Sitting in a chair with his feet against a brass rail beside the boiler in the basement of a hospital from which he was thought to have escaped Wednesday night Gerald Chapman, leader in the million dollar labor mail robbery in New York 31 months ago, was nearly captured by Harry Bishop, a guard from the Atlanta penitentiary.

Bishop, in giving attention to Miss Estelle Stott, a nurse who accompanied him when the discovery was made and who thereupon fainted told Chapman to go back to his room. A few minutes later, however, when Miss Stott had been revived and Bishop went to the room Chapman was not there.

Discovery of Chapman was made when Bishop, who is on duty guarding a federal prisoner now in the hospital, started for breakfast with Miss Stott. While passing the boiler room a view disclosed Chapman. Bishop and Miss Stott descended on him. He rose and offered Miss Stott a glass of water. She took it and then he turned and fled.

Bishop then turned his attention to the nurse and after he had revived her went up after the prisoner. No trace of Chapman could be found.

Chapman has escaped twice recently.

REPORT SHOWS VARIOUS TREES GROW IN N. D.

Federal Bulletin States That 1,448,658 Trees Distributed in 5 Years

During a period of five years, 1916 to 1920 a total of 1,448,658 small trees were used in making plantings on 1,234 farms in North and South Dakota and Montana, according to Bulletin No. 1,113 recently issued by the U. S. department of Agriculture under the title of "Development of Co-operative Shelterbelt Demonstrations on the Northern Great Plains" through the Maudslayi office.

Some twenty different species of trees were extensively tested and notes made on several more. Successful plantings were made on 716 farms. Of tree species extensively tested, boxelder, green ash, white elm, and caragana have proven suitable for general planting. Other promising species tested on a limited scale are Northwest poplar, Russian olive, chokecherry, buffaloberry, black hick spruce, Colorado blue spruce, Scotch pine and jack pine.

Four species in common use for prairie planting in regions of more favorable rainfall, have shown themselves unable to resist the drought conditions on the plains. These are the Carolina poplar, Norway poplar, Russian Golden willow and laurel leaf willow.

Best results were obtained on land that had been well cultivated and carefully summer fallowed, during the season before trees were planted. No success was shown when the trees were planted on ground that was newly broken or on ground that was full of either grass or weeds. Clean cultivation after trees were set out was found essential to the continued growth of the trees.

Trees were found to be subject to a number of insect pests, the most severe probably being the injury done by jack rabbits.

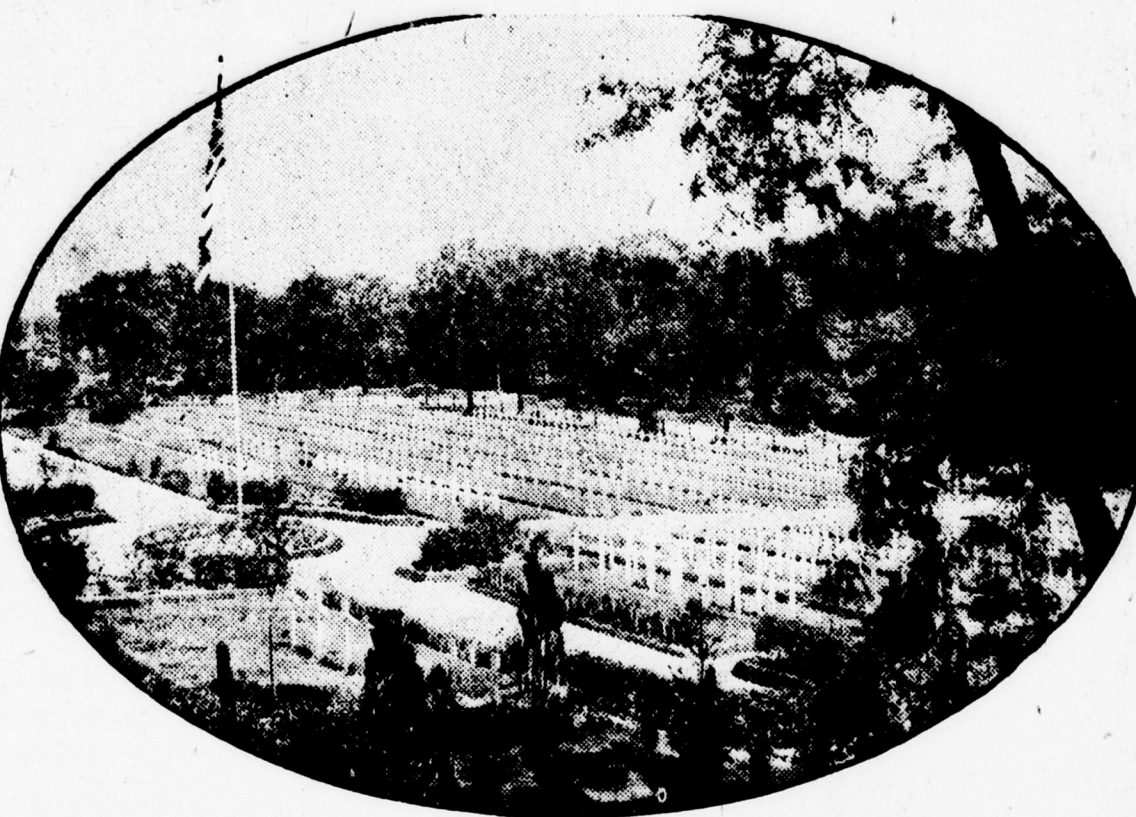

Such trees as boxelder, green ash, and white elm grown from seed that was taken from trees native to the Great Plains showed greater hardiness than the same species grown from seed of trees for planting on the Great Plains than when secured from a northern source.

A limited number of copies of the bulletin are available for free distribution to people living in the Great Plains area by writing the station at Mandan. The data comprised in the report includes the finding of five years experimentation carried on by Capt. Robert Wilson and his aides.

SEE A NEW RECORD

Receipts For First Quarter Indicate Rapid Growth During the Year

Postoffice receipts in Bismarck show a marked increase for the first quarter of 1923, as compared to the same period during 1922, according to compilations made in the local office. While the increase in part is due to the legislative business, many other factors have entered into it, according to postoffice officials. A comparison of the receipts for the respective quarters of 1922 and 1923 follows:

	1922	1923
January	$10,159.60	$14,203.29
February	12,173.16	15,224.89
March	10,641.90	11,379.84
Total	$32,974.66	$40,808.02

The total receipts for the postoffice for the year 1922 were $127,480.18, and the record for the first quarter of this year gives the postoffice a fair start toward exceeding that total, Postmaster Henry T. Murphy said.

Postmaster Murphy said today that application would be pressed for additional carriers in Bismarck after July 1, when the new biennial appropriations become effective. Because of deficiency in appropriations until July 1 this year, the postoffice department has issued a sweeping order limiting deliveries to once a day. The one-delivery-a-day rule is effective in Bismarck. Formerly there was one complete delivery and carriers would go as far as possible in making a second delivery in the eight hours per day they work.

Bismarck has had no additional carriers since 1902, although the town has more than doubled in population, Mr. Murphy said.

Indianapolis, April 6.—To make the 32,100 American soldier graves in Europe bloom with flowers every Memorial Day as brightly as if they were at home is the objective of a fund campaign undertaken by the American Legion.

The legion, its headquarters here announces, is seeking an endowment fund of $100,000, which will provide sufficient income to decorate the graves of every American soldier abroad every year.

The fund will be obtained in the United States by personal and community subscription. Any one can help and no amount is too small.

For the past three years, decoration of the graves in France was in the hands of the Paris post of the American Legion.

According to the most recent figures the graves of Americans are divided as follows: 31,400 in France and Belgium, 488 in England, 140 in Scotland, 40 in Ireland, and the body of one American sailor in Spain.

Contributions already have come in. The first of the World War leaders to contribute was former President Woodrow Wilson. The first legion post was Chief Paduke Post, Paducah, Ky., closely followed by a post in Kansas City, Kan.

Partnership is formed Geo. P. Little and Clyde Bonham Enter Business in San Pedro

George P. Little, assistant cashier of the First National Bank, and C. A. Bonham, formerly in the jewelry business in Bismarck, have established the Bonham-Little Jewelry Company in San Pedro, California.

Mr. Little said today. Tentative arrangements were made during Mr. Little's visit to California this winter and completed by correspondence since his return. He will go to San Pedro about May 15. The store already has been established, with San Pedro, the harbor city of Los Angeles, now has a population of about 34,000, having been built up within a very few years. Mr. Little believes that it will grow very rapidly.

Mr. Bonham was in Santa Anna for several months after leaving Bismarck, retiring from the Bonham Bros. store in this city, which is conducted by R. E. Bonham.

DRISCOLL BANK IS REOPENED

More Than Double Legal Reserve Is Provided

The doors of the Driscoll State Bank of Driscoll, Burleigh county, were open again today after operations of the bank had been suspended since November 10, 1922, it was announced by Gilbert Semington, state examiner.

The bank was reorganized through a 100 percent stock assessment made by the stockholders and through other added strength, enabling the bank to reopen with a reserve more than double the legal requirement, Mr. Semington said.

New officers of the bank are: President, J. H. Ellwell; Huron, S. D.; Vice-President, Alice Barnes, Huron, S. D.; Cashier, C. B. Mills, Huron, S. D.; Assistant Cashier, E. J. Erickson Driscoll; directors Alice Barnes, Mr. Ellwell and W. L. Mall of Huron, S. D. The Huron people are interested in the Farmers and Merchants Bank of the South Dakota city.

Mr. Mall, here to complete the details of the reorganization, expressed himself pleased with the result. The capital of the bank is $15,000.

Break Came Over Government Plan to Distribute Doles to Unemployed

London, April 6. The Swedish cabinet headed by Hjalmar Branting as premier and Foreign Minister tendered its resignation today, says an Exchange Telegraph dispatch from Stockholm. The Branting government was defeated in the upper chamber of the Swedish parliament last night by a vote of 76 to 60 on a proposal by the government to distribute doles among the unemployed.

Stockholm dispatches last night indicated a feeling in many circles in Sweden that the vote rejecting the government's proposal was the first sign of a general reaction against the Socialists in power through the Branting ministry.

WEATHER FORECASTS

For Bismarck and vicinity: Mostly cloudy tonight and Saturday; probably snow.

For North Dakota: Mostly cloudy tonight and Saturday; probably snow west portion. Colder tonight east portion.

General Weather Conditions The pressure is low over Utah, Nevada and Idaho, and over the upper Great lakes region and precipitation has occurred generally throughout the northern states. The weather is fair from the middle and lower Mississippi valley southward. Temperatures have risen over the southern states but the high pressure area centered over Saskatchewan and Manitoba is accompanied by colder weather from the northern Rocky Mountain region.

Road Conditions The general highway conditions of the State are mainly good at this season as could be expected at this season of the year, especially in view of the fact that most of the frost is still in the ground. Roads leading into these main highways, however, are mostly in poor condition. As soon as auto travel becomes general a list of detours on all main travel routes will be reported.

Police Believe That They Were Murdered and Bodies Carried to Spot

New York, April 6.—Miss Bessie McMahony of Utica, N. Y., and Mrs. Irene Blandino of Jersey City, N. J., were found murdered with their throats cut along an isolated roadside at Dongan Hills, Staten Island, early today. The police believe they were slain elsewhere and their bodies thrown from an automobile. Mrs. Blandino, who had an artificial leg, was identified through the finding of a receipt for the limb.

Miss McMahon had been visiting her at her home in Jersey City, according to the police.

Thirty feet from the road side the police discovered in a clump of bushes a blood-stained knife. In addition to their throats being cut a stab wound was found in the back of the girl.

One girl was a blonde, the other had red hair.

The girls had been dead from four to five hours when found, according to physicians. There were no signs of a struggle at the roadside.

The receipt was issued by J. N. Esther, New York official limb manufacturer.

Esther said Mrs. Blandino had told him that she was married 15 years old. Her husband, a barber in Jersey City, told him last week, he said, that he had gone into the saloon business in Jersey City.

JURORS STICK IN TRIAL OF WM. Z. FOSTER

Stand Six to Six for 31 Hours and Are Discharged by The Court

WOMAN FOR ACQUITTAL

St. Joseph, Mich., April 6.—Not once in thirty-one hours and fifty minutes of deliberation did the jurors in the trial of William Z. Foster of Chicago, charged with criminal syndicalism, charge from the stand taken on their first ballot, voting each time six for acquittal and six for conviction from about 10 o'clock Wednesday morning until about 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon, when the jury was dismissed, hopelessly deadlocked.

About 38 ballots were taken during that time.

Mrs. Minerva Olson, the only woman on the jury, was one of those voting for acquittal. Five of the six standing for conviction were farmers, the other was a crossing watchman.

The inability of jurors to agree was regarded by Foster as a victory. His counsel, Frank P. Walsh, issued a statement thanking the talesmen but said the defense was slightly disappointed because it had expected an acquittal.

Foster was brought to trial for attending the Communist party convention near here last August, an organization alleged by the state to urge violence and force in social and industrial revolution.

The defense's attorney and Foster himself denied any connection with the party and also asserted that the Communist party did not advocate crime, but merely stood for peaceful changes in the present form of government.

Whether Foster will be tried again will not be decided until after the trial of Charles Rutenberg of Cleveland, former member of the Communist party executive committee. Foster was the first tried under the Michigan criminal syndicalism act.

NEW YORK BANKER SUPPORTS STATE'S ACTION IN MARTIN TABERT DEATH CASE

Support for North Dakotans in their activity in support of a thorough investigation in Florida of the death of Martin Taber, Munich, N. D. youth alleged to have been flogged to death in a private convict camp, is pledged by Wm. J. Mason Jr., Vice-President of the Kings Country Trust Company, a large institution of Brooklyn, N. Y.

In a letter to Governor R. A. Nesbitt, Mr. Mason says he plans to interest Florida bankers in the case. His letter to Governor Nesbitt follows:

"The New York World prints an article relative to the death of young Martin Taber of your state. According to the World you have made a demand that such a system cease. I have written a letter this morning to the Governor of Florida condemning any such practices. In addition I have sent out several prominent bankers of his state a

HOUSE CONCURS IN ACTION OF STATE SENATE

Joint Legislative Committees to Inquire Into Cause of Dakota Boy's Death

MAY ABOLISH SYSTEM Governor's Recommendation Expected to Lead to Drastic Legislation

Tallahassee, Fla., April 6.—The house today concurred in the senate resolution adopted yesterday providing for a joint legislative investigation into the death of Martin Tabert of North Dakota, who died in a private convict camp from alleged brutal treatment.

Concurrence of the house came on a viva voce vote with not more than two dissenting. Today's action was without the fiery debate that characterized injection of Tabert's death in the proceedings Wednesday.

Two Oppose Rep. Lewis again opposed the investigation, arguing that it was an encroachment on the judiciary. Rep. Griffith took the floor with him.

The joint committee will be composed of three members from the senate and two from the house.

Reps. Davis, Kendry, Stokes and Lake again championed the investigation.

The Governor of North Dakota, under the terms of the resolution, will be called for all evidence in his hands concerning Tabert's death.

ASKS ABOLITION Tallahassee, Fla., April 6.—Pointing to the death of Martin Tabert, under the terms of the resolution, will be called for all evidence in his hands concerning Tabert's death.

Representative Wade said that the death of Tabert was the foulest blot on the state's record and should be avenged if it put one's neck in the noose. The fact that the investigation of Tabert's death was being conducted by a committee of the legislature, he said, was enough, he said, to warrant investigation. They are playing to the galleries, commented Representative Willard, who opposed investigation, declaring it was the business of the governor and the courts.

STORY CORROBORATION New York, April 6.—The story of Martin Tabert's death, as told by a New York doctor, corroborated in New York today. Max Grimm, aged 28, fireman in the Mohawk hotel, Brooklyn, revealed in the form of a diary he kept while himself a prisoner in the Putnam county company "splendid" camp at Clara, Fla., where the North Dakota farm boy died 14 months ago, soon after he had been whipped for complaining that the shoes furnished him were too small.

"I saw Tabert beaten by Captain Higginbotham," Grimm said. "I was working in a ditch across from Martin and I knew he was a sick man. When he got that beating he was hardly able to stand before he was struck. I was in that camp two weeks and three days, and was myself whipped by Captain Higginbotham. Tabert at one time worked in a ditch with me and we stood in water up to our thighs. He was weak and trembling so he could hardly lift his shovel. His eyes glittered like those of a half-crazy man, and he could hardly speak."

Max Grimm was discharged Jan. 23, 1922, nine days before the death of Tabert. Riding a freight train caused his arrest and imprisonment, as it had that of Tabert. Grimm spent 14 months in the Putnam county company "splendid" camp at Clara, Fla., and then was sent to the convict camp at Glen St. Mary, being transferred later to Clara, where he met Martin Tabert.

"In the turpentine camp in Glen St. Mary," Grimm said, "I worked with 40 Negroes, and 46 white men. We had to go into our dirty sleeping quarters naked and sleep three under one quilt on one dirty mattress. We were given insufficient food—half cooked beans and swamp water with a piece of bacon every other day. No coffee was given us at all—just swamp water."

"There I was forced to hold down a sick Negro while the boss beat him because he did not work fast enough. He had no shoes and his feet were bleeding. The Negro could not work any faster and he was half crazy with pain and fear."

TARIFF BODY PROBES SUGAR

Washington, April 6.—The tariff commission began the drafting of a preliminary statement covering the sugar price situation in reply to the President's requests for information on that subject. It was indicated that probably a week would be consumed in getting together certain statistics, which the commission can obtain from government sources.

OFFICIALS OF MICHIGAN IN FIGHT ON CULT

Governor and Attorney-General Leave for Benton Harbor in Probe

WORK UNDER SECRECY Reported that Leader of Colony, Purnell, Has Fled From Benton Harbor

Lansing, Mich., April 6.—The state of Michigan's activities against the Israelite House of David were being carried on under a cloak of secrecy today, with the highest officials believed to be taking a hand in the proceedings.

Governor Alex J. Groesbeck and Attorney General Andrew B. Dougherty left here hurriedly last night and are believed to have gone to Benton Harbor to investigate reports that Benjamin Purnell, leader of the House of David colony, has disappeared.

The state's quo warranto proceeding filed in the local circuit court to compel the cult leader to show cause why the colony should not be abolished will not be halted in the event Purnell has fled, state officials said.

Purnell's lieutenants in the organization will be obliged to enter the court if their chiefs cannot be located.

State officials expressed the opinion that if the Governor and Attorney General have gone to Benton Harbor their visit is in connection with a reported plan to institute criminal proceedings against Purnell.

HARDING AGAIN SAYS COOLIDGE

Vice-President Predicts Renomination and Reelection of Chief

Washington, April 6.—Responding today to inquiries as to his attitude toward 1924, Vice President Calvin Coolidge predicted that President Harding's renomination and reelection would be demanded by the people because of the record of his administration.

The Vice President declined to predict what his own attitude would be toward a renomination as Mr. Harding's running-mate, indicating that he did not regard the present as an opportune time for discussion of the subject.

PRESIDENT TO LIVE ON FARM ON RETIREMENT

Will Become "Gentleman Farmer" Near His Old Home. Close Friends Say

FARM IS PURCHASED

Marion, Ohio, April 5.—When he leaves the White House President Harding plans to return to the scene of his childhood to become a gentleman farmer and spend much of his time writing.

This was announced today by the president's close home town friends following his purchase yesterday of a farm in North Bloomfield township, Morrow county, where he was born. The purchase consists of 285 1/2 acres. The original Harding farm where the President was born consists of 185 1/2 acres and is far away from any railroad. It is about a 20-mile drive from Marion.

President Harding has told close friends that he expects to visit the farm in July and possibly sooner to plan improvements. Friends say that the contemplated improvements include a modern bungalow and a golf course.

The farm immediately adjoins the quiet little village of Blooming Grove, a town of about 200 persons, where the President obtained his first schooling. The Blooming Grove was laid out and founded by Simon, a great-great uncle of Warren G. Harding.

President Harding lived on the farm until he was about seven years old, when his family moved.

A brother of George Haneckey, who killed Ellen Albertson and then took his own life, will come to Bismarck from Tacoma, Washington, to arrange for disposition of the remains, still held by Coroner Gobel, it was said today.

After the brother had been located word was received that he would come to Bismarck as soon as possible.

BEULAH MINE CLOSED DOWN

Beulah, N. D., April 5.—The Beulah Coal Mining company's mine probably will be closed indefinitely, with heavy operations suspended for the season, because of differences with miners. It is understood a surplus of coal is on hand to supply the present and near future needs of the company's customers.

According to company officials the Miners said they demanded that the scales of the mine be tested, that a checker be paid by the returns on check the weighman's returns on coal mined, that the eight-hour day be made effective and that discharges be reinstated. The men, they alleged, were discharged because of the requests made.

CONFERENCE POSTPONED

Wheat Marketing 'Confab' To Be Held Tuesday

St. Paul, April 5.—The conference between officials of the Farm Bureau Federation of North and South Dakota, Montana and Minnesota with representatives of the three existing co-operative wheat marketing organization operating in those states, which was to be held in Fargo tomorrow, has been postponed until Tuesday of next week, J. F. Reed, president of the Minnesota Farm Bureau Federation, announced today. Inability of some of those expecting to attend the conference to arrive in time is given as the reason for the latter date, Mr. Reed said. The meeting Tuesday is for the purpose of talking over co-operative marketing with the object of reaching an agreement between the United States Grain Growers' Association of Minneapolis, the Equity Co-operative Exchange and the Northwest Wheat Growers' association whereby they will co-ordinate their work to form one big wheat marketing organization to handle the major portion of the wheat crop of the four North-western states.

WOMEN'S CLUBS AID LIBRARIES

Establish Many Where Tax
Funds Are Lacking

Women's clubs throughout North Dakota are doing a valuable work in the development of community libraries, says the biennial report of Miss Mary E. Downey, director of the state library commission. Nevertheless, the directors say, the extension of tax-supported libraries is necessary if there is to be permanence achieved through this work.

"The staff of the State Library commission should be comprised of efficient workers that every member would be able to do efficient work and the staff should have enough members to permit sufficient work to meet the needs of the state," says Miss Downey.

Aside from the 17 tax supported libraries there are some 40 non-tax supported libraries in the state, and the report is bolstered by women's clubs, still unorganized and undeveloped for the most part. With activity on the part of the library commission and cooperation with the Women's clubs the material and efficiency of these libraries can be greatly increased. The great thing, however, is to get tax support for them, as the permanency of no library can be assured without it.

Book drives in some towns have proved successful in replenishing libraries and they will be extended in the state, the report says. Thousands of good books were obtained in Bismarck, Dickinson and Devils Lake by this method, Miss Downey says.

The last year has been one of reconstruction and reorganization of the state library maintained in the state capital building. Miss Downey states in her report. There were at the time of compilation of the report 21,796 books in the state library. Pamphlets are in process of classification and arrangement, these forming a valuable part of the reference material of the library, the report says. The records show that in the year, ending on the 31st of June, 1922, there were loaned 1680 books and 4039 pamphlets and clippings in answer to 2,854 requests, and in the following year 3,617 books and 3,770 pamphlets, clippings and other periodicals were loaned in answer to 4,315 requests.

Great Britain Seeks To Develop Aviation

London, April 6.—Signs that Great Britain is planning to devote a great deal more attention to aviation, both civil and military, were to be noted during the two days' sessions of the Third Air Conference just ended.

Although only one resolution was passed, calling upon the government to give immediate consideration to the foundation of an air mail service throughout the Empire, there was a great deal of serious talk about flying possibilities by speakers who knew their subject whether technical or political. All of them emphasized the absolute necessity of England's maintaining a pace in aviation equal to that of any other nation, both from the point of view of commercial flying and the part aerial tactics will play in future military affairs.

Phrases such as "regular 12-hour passenger service between London and New York" and "large fleets of electrically directed airplanes carrying high explosives, traveling without pilots at night, perfectly silent both as to their propellers and engines, carrying death to any town on which they might descend," were used as arguments in favor of government assistance in aerial development. These arguments were advocated no less strongly by government officials than by prominent technicians and persons who might be interested in any government subsidy that may be decided upon.

There are two principal obstacles in the way of aerial development on a large scale: the government's budget is full of necessary items of no mean magnitude and there has been considerable rivalry between the Royal Air Force and the Admiralty as to which should hold the dominant position in the development of such new schemes.

Besides, as was pointed out by Sir Samuel Hoare, Secretary of State for Air, there is the obstacle of "afternoon confusion in the world." He had in mind, particularly, the fact that Germany is not a signatory to the air convention, which has controlled civil aviation in European countries.

HOW OHIO CRASH KILLED EIGHT

Eight were killed and more than a score injured in the tangled wreckage shown in these two pictures, of a Big Four New-York-to-Cincinnati crack flier, derailed near Columbus. The train, running late into Columbus, was winding a wide curve when the engineer saw an automobile in the track. He applied his brakes so suddenly that the engine and train of seven cars, carrying 108 passengers, was derailed. The train, traveling at a speed estimated at 40 miles an hour, struck the automobile squarely, killing three of its occupants outright. The upper picture shows the maze of wreckage from which dead and injured were removed. Lower picture shows the engine piled along side two cars, showing how the shock shuffled the train like a deck of cards.

Relics of Indians Brought to Light In The Ozarks

Elk Springs, Mo., April 6.—Shelters beneath overhanging limestone bluffs along the White and Cowskin rivers in the Ozarks of Missouri and Arkansas are today giving up to science the relics of a prehistoric race that inhabited this section upwards of a thousand years ago. The work of excavation is being done near here by an expedition from the Museum of the American Indian, Iley Foundation.

Buried deep in the dry dust of centuries beneath these formations of shelving rock where the ancients made their homes, these relics are being unearthed with no little difficulty. A cloud of powdery dust arises as the workers search the deposits for traces of a civilization that is still unidentified. Use of masks often is necessary. For the present, the ancient people of the region are being referred to by Mr. R. Harrington, in charge of the expedition, as the Ozark bluff-dwellers. They have not been identified as the ancestors of any modern Indian tribe.

In one of the rock-shelters, particularly on the Cowskin or Elk river, the expedition has found near the surface traces of a different and more modern, but still pre-colonial, Indian race. These Indians, according to Mr. Harrington, probably were the Osages or some related tribe. It is estimated that even these specimens are at least three or four hundred years old. Those left by the spear-throwing bluff-dwellers of the Ozarks, which also have been uncovered, are probably upwards of a thousands years old. Everything so far found is purely aboriginal, Mr. Harrington explained, not the slightest trace of the white man's handiwork or influence having been discovered. The specimens include basketry, woven textiles, wooden articles, implements of bone and horn and even pieces of pottery. Some of the articles no doubt were buried by the ancient dwellers for safe keeping, it is believed by the excavators, while others simply were out and were discarded or lost in the ashes and trash of generations that has accumulated beneath the bluffs. At some places the deposits have been found so well protected by the overhanging rock formation that they are absolutely dry, which has resulted in remarkable preservation. It was a visit by Mr. Harrington at the home in Seneca, Mo. of Dr. W. C. Barnard, who had one of the largest private collections of Indian relics in existence at that time, that resulted in the present expedition. That was in the fall of 1914.

"Among his specimens," said Mr. Harrington, "were a number of pieces of baskets, textile fabrics and wooden articles which gave every evidence of being prehistoric. Know that such perishable articles dating from that period are practically unknown east of Utah and New Mexico. I inquired as to their origin and was surprised to learn that they came from the Ozarks, especially from the district along the upper White River, where they had been found in dry deposits beneath overhanging bluffs. I then and there planned to explore some of these rocky bluffs or 'rock shelters,' as they are called by archeologists, and the opportunity did not come until May, 1922, when the present expedition set forth from the museum."

That expedition consisted of three members of the museum staff. In included besides Mr. Harrington, C. O. Turbyfill, who had accompanied Mr. Harrington on previous expeditions, and D. A. Cadzow, who had conducted a number of Arctic expeditions for the museum. The district in Carroll and Benton counties (Arkansas), lying between Eureka Springs and Rogers, especially about the little settlements of Mundell and Narue, both on White River, was worked. The excavations were stopped Sept. 9, 1922, and the expedition returned to New York for the public opening of the museum. It returned to the Ozarks early in January of the present year. The work on White River was completed February 14 when the expedition, now consisting only of Mr. Harrington and Mr. Turbyfill, moved its camp to Noel, Mo. It has been work-

MANY ATTEND SHIELDS RITES

Fraternal Organizations Are Present in Bodies

Scores of friends attended the funeral rites for N. J. Shields, who passed away suddenly, at the Methodist Episcopal church yesterday afternoon. Twenty-one Odd Fellows in the full uniform of the military branch of the order accompanied the body from the Webb undertaking chapel to the church and from the church to the cemetery. Pallbearers were members of the Odd Fellows. Mrs. B. M. Dunn and Wm. J. Noggle sang, with Miss Rowley as accompanist. Rev. S. F. Hultyard delivered the funeral sermon.

Members of the Odd Fellows lodge, the Knights of Pythias and the carpenters' union occupied seats in a body at the funeral services. Many beautiful floral offerings surmounted the casket.

Word was received that both a son and a daughter of the deceased are in Seattle, both being unable to come because of illness.

Burial was in Fairview cemetery.

"At Glen St. Mary I saw Captain Ruthenberg and Higgins beat a number of men. I was a trusty guard for three days. One day I had to take my squad of nine Negroes out and make them lie on their bellies while Captain Ruthenberg beat their backs with the leather strap.

"I was supposed to shoot them—I had a rifle—if they did not take their beating I had made up my mind I would do nothing of the sort. Only the fact that I had a short sentence and hoped to get away soon kept me from turning my gun on some of the bosses.

"In winter weather we were sent out into the woods and swamps at 5 a. m. in the darkness. Dressed in striped pants and blouses, naked stiff with the pine sap and giving us no warmth, we were wet to the shoulders by frost, as we went through the swamps and woods.

"Sometimes men were beaten because they did not run from the place to another. When, for instance, we finished digging in one spot we were supposed to shoulder our picks and shovels and run to the next spot. Many of the men were unable to run and they got it."

COMPLETE WORK ON JOURNALS

The work of comparison, correction and indexing of the house and senate journals is now complete. The senate journal work was done by W. E. Parsons and A. D. McKinnon and that of the house journal by J. E. Tucker and H. Henderson. Mr. Tucker said the job is the most thorough since that of the 1915 journal, and was painstakingly made according to instructions. Mr. Tucker will leave probably today for his home in Devils Lake and Mr. Henderson for Medora. Mr. McKinnon went to Goodrich before returning to accept a place with the highway commission. Mr. Parsons remains in Bismarck, his home.

Holsteins Make New Production Records

Chicago, April 6.—The 1922 leaders in the seven classes of different ages of pure-bred Holstein cows produced an average of 29,055 pounds of milk and 1,220 pounds of butter in one year. In the full age and senior four year classes previous records were broken according to a report of the national headquarters of the Holstein-Friesian Association.

During the year, 18,000 cows were tested for production and since the establishment of the official test 25,000 cows have passed the production required for their age, the report stated. All tests are supervised by state colleges of agriculture. Last year, 113,772 Holsteins were registered with the association.

In the full age class, May Walker of the Holstein company at Austin, displaced Dutchess Skylark Ormsby, a Washington state cow, with a production of 31,610 pounds milk and 1,523 pounds butter. Grahamholm Columba Pauline Segis, a Minnesota cow, displaced another Minnesota cow in the senior four-year class

CURED HER RHEUMATISM

Knowing from terrible experience the suffering caused by rheumatism, Mrs. J. E. Hurst, who lives at 608 E. PATRONS WILL ORGANIZE IN WING VICINITY

County Superintendent Hopes to Extend Organizations in County

Patrons of the schools in the Wing district will gather at Wing Saturday night to form a Parent-Teacher Association, with the assistance of Miss Madge Runey, county superintendent. This will be the second such organization in the county outside of Bismarck. Miss Runey hopes to be able to organize such branches in all townships.

A progressive teachers association in the Regan district, which embraces teachers from several schools, will have a meeting at Canfield on April 14. The teachers will present a program and there will be a community dinner, all patrons being invited. This teachers association has been very successful. Miss Runey said. Meetings are held every two months and always it is a community affair.

Some of the short term schools of the county now are beginning to close up affairs.

The annual county play-day will be held next October 1, instead of this spring, as in former years. Miss Runey said, the reason being that many short term schools will be dismissed before a date in the spring when the play-day could be held. It is planned next fall to include an exhibit of the county school work on play-day, in Bismarck.

MANY FRIENDS PAY RESPECTS TO MRS. HANSEN

Scores of friends attended the funeral of Mrs. J. N. Hansen yesterday afternoon at Perry's parlors. Rev. H. C. Postlethwaite, paid a touching tribute to the memory of the deceased who was a teacher at Will school for three years, 1907 to 1910, coming here from Dickinson, where she had taught three years previously. Mrs. Hansen was a graduate of the high school in Glenwood, Minn., and attended Mayville Normal.

Wreaths and bouquets of flowers were used in great profusion to bank the funeral bier which was surrounded by friends and relatives. Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Hansen of Moorhead, Mrs. C. Hansen of Spokane, Wash., mother of Mr. J. N. Hansen, Mrs. M. Nelson and J. Olson of Starbuck, Minn., sister and brother of the deceased, and Miss V. Harrison of Valley City, were here to attend the funeral service. During the services the offices of the state highway commission of which Mr. Hansen was formerly assistant highway engineer were closed as a token of respect for Mrs. Hansen. During the services George Humphreys and Henry Halverson sang "Abide With Me," "Jesus Lover of My Soul," and "Somewhere," with Mrs. Arthur Bauer at the piano. Acting as pallbearers were Roy Johnson, E. N. Thompson, B. F. Tillotson, Harry Ellithorp, William Harris and Lawrence Belk. Interment took place in Fairview cemetery.

Fraternal Organizations Are Present in Bodies

Scores of friends attended the funeral rites for N. J. Shields, who passed away suddenly, at the Methodist Episcopal church yesterday afternoon. Twenty-one Odd Fellows in the full uniform of the military branch of the order accompanied the body from the Webb undertaking chapel to the church and from the church to the cemetery. Pallbearers were members of the Odd Fellows. Mrs. B. M. Dunn and Wm. J. Noggle sang, with Miss Rowley as accompanist. Rev. S. F. Halfyard delivered the funeral sermon.

Members of the Odd Fellows lodge, the Knights of Pythias and the carpenters' union occupied seats in a body at the funeral services. Many beautiful floral offerings surmounted the casket.

Word was received that both a son and a daughter of the deceased are in Seattle, both being unable to come because of illness.

Burial was in Fairview cemetery.

WOMEN'S CLUBS AID LIBRARIES

Establish Many Where Tax Funds Are Lacking

Women's clubs throughout North Dakota are doing a valuable work in the development of community libraries, says the biennial report of Miss Mary D. Downey, director of the state library commission. Nevertheless, the director says, the situation of tax-supported libraries is not as favorable as it should be, and it is necessary if there is to be permanent achievement through this work.

"The staff of the State Library Commission should be comprised of such efficient workers that every member would be able to do efficient work and the staff should have enough members to permit sufficient work to meet the needs of the state," says Miss Downey.

"Aside from the 17 tax-supported libraries, there are some 40 non-tax libraries in the state. The state library commission is in the process of classifying and arranging these libraries, and a valuable part of the reference material of the library, the report says. The records show that in the year, ending on the 30th of June, 1921, there were loaned 1680 books and 4039 pamphlets and clippings in answer to 2854 requests, and in the following year 3,617 books and 2,790 periodicals, clippings and pamphlets were loaned in answer to 4,315 requests.

Great Britain Seeks To Develop Aviation

London, April 6.—Signs that Great Britain is planning to devote a great deal more attention to aviation, both civil and military, were to be noted during the two days' sessions of the Third Air Conference just ended.

Although only one resolution was passed, calling upon the government to give immediate consideration to the foundation of an air mail service throughout the Empire, there was a great deal of serious talk about flying possibilities by speakers who knew their subjects, whether technical or political. All of them emphasized the absolute necessity of England's maintaining a pace in aviation equal to that of any other nation, both from the point of view of commercial flying and the part aerial tactics will play in future military affairs.

Phrases such as "regular 12-hour passenger service between London and New York" and "large fleets of electrically directed airplanes carrying high explosives and traveling with out pilots at night, perfectly silent both as to their propellers and engines, carrying death to any town on which they might descend," were used as arguments in favor of government assistance in aerial development. These arguments were advanced not less strongly by government officials than by prominent technicians and persons who might be interested in any government subsidy that may be decided upon.

There are two principal obstacles in the way of aerial development on a large scale; the government's budget is full of necessary items of no mean magnitude, and there has been considerable rivalry between the Royal Air Force and the Admiralty, to which should hold the dominant position in the development of such new schemes.

Besides, as was pointed out by Sir Samuel Hoare, Secretary of State for Air, there is the obstacle of "afternoon confusion in the world." He had reference, particularly to the fact that Germany is not a signatory to the air convention, which has controlled civil aviation in European countries.

HOW OHIO CRASH KILLED EIGHT

Eight were killed and more than a score injured in the terrible wreckage shown in these two pictures, of a Big Four New-York-to-Cincinnati crash flier, derailed near Columbus. The train, running late into Columbus, was wading a wide curve when the engineer saw an automobile in the track. He applied his brakes so suddenly that the entire train of seven cars, carrying 108 passengers, was derailed. The train, traveling at a speed estimated at 40 miles an hour, struck the automobile squarely, killing three of its occupants outright. The upper picture shows the mangled wreckage from which dead and injured were removed. Lower picture shows the engine piled along side two cars, showing how the shock shuffled the train like a deck of cards.

tries, and until there are amendments to international regulations governing commercial aviation, there will be limitations to its development. These amendments are expected to be effected very shortly.

One of the main factors on the government's aviation program, as was revealed at the conference, is a plan for the training of reserve pilots and mechanics.

Strong arguments were advanced from the point of view of economy. Commander Charles Denniston Burney, member of Parliament for Mid-Jessex, pointed out that 16 airplanes could be produced for the cost of one battleship, that nine airplanes could do the work of 60 cruisers, thereby saving the sum of 51,000,000 pounds sterling, and that per square mile of reconnaissance, 22nd day of August, 1922, 25 shillings what it would take 77 pounds to do, with cruisers.

Relics of Indians Brought to Light In The Ozarks

Elk Springs, Mo., April 6.—Shelters beneath overhanging limestone bluffs along the White and Cowskin rivers in the Ozarks of Missouri and Arkansas are today giving up to science the relics of a prehistoric race that inhabited this section upwards of a thousand years ago. The work of excavation is being done near here by an expedition from the Museum of the American Indian, Ivey Foundation.

Buried deep in the dry dust of centuries beneath these formations of shelving rock where the ancients made their homes, these relics are being unearthed with no little difficulty. A cloud of powdery dust arises as the workers search the deposits for traces of a civilization that is still unidentified. Use of masks often is necessary. For the present, the ancient people of the region are being referred to by Mr. R. Harrington, in charge of the expedition, as the Ozark bluff-dwellers. They have not been identified as the ancestors of any modern Indian tribe.

In one of the rock-shelters, particularly on the Cowskin or Elk river, the expedition has found near the surface, traces of a different and more modern, but still pre-colonial, Indian race. These Indians, according to Mr. Harrington, probably were the Osages or some related tribe. It is estimated that even these specimens are at least three or four hundred years old. Those left by the spear-throwing bluff-dwellers of the Ozarks, which also have been uncovered, are probably upwards of a thousands years old.

Everything so far found is purely aboriginal, Mr. Harrington explained, not the slightest trace of the white man's handiwork or influence having been discovered. The specimens include basketry, woven textiles, wooden articles, implements of bone and horn and even pieces of pottery. Some of the articles no doubt were buried by the ancient dwellers for safe keeping, it is believed by the excavators, while others simply were out and were discarded or lost in the ashes and trash of generations that has accumulated beneath the bluffs. At some places the deposits have been found so well protected by the overhanging rock formation that they are absolutely dry, which has resulted in remarkable preservation.

It was a visit by Mr. Harrington at the home in Seneca, Mo., of Dr. W. C. Barnard, who had one of the largest private collections of Indian relics in existence at that time, that resulted in the present expedition. That was in the fall of 1914.

"Among his specimens," said Mr. Harrington, "were a number of pieces of basketry, textile fabrics and wooden articles which gave every evidence of being prehistoric. Knowing that such perishable articles dating from that period are practically unknown east of Utah and New Mexico, I inquired as to their origin and was surprised to learn that they came from the Ozarks, especially from the district along the upper White River where they had been found in dry deposits beneath overhanging bluffs. I then and there planned to explore some of these rocky bluffs or 'rock shelters,' as they are called by archaeologists, but the opportunity did not come until May, 1922, when the present expedition set forth from the museum."

That expedition consisted of three members of the museum staff. In included besides Mr. Harrington, C. O. Turbyfill, who had accompanied Mr. Harrington on previous expeditions, and D. A. Cadzow, who had conducted a number of Arctic expeditions for the museum. The district in Carroll and Benton counties (Arkansas), lying between Eureka Springs and Rogers, especially about the little settlements of Mundell and

Davis, both on the White River, was worked. The excavations were stopped Sept. 9, 1922, and the expedition returned to New York for the public opening of the museum. It returned to the Ozarks early in January of the present year. The work on White River was completed February 14 when the expedition, now consisting only of Mr. Harrington and Mr. Turbyfill, moved its camp to Noel, Mo. It has been work-

KISMET—APRIL 6

Six years ago this April 6, the United States declared war on Germany. We won't bore you with a lot of cheap oratory about what our country did in the war—such things as statistics and the force we exerted in swinging the decision. These things, you already know. Or, to be more precise, each of us has his individual opinion.

On this April 6, your thoughts swing out and contemplate the world as the war left it—Europe, in particular.

Things still are messed up badly. But they're steadily getting untangled. Europe is returning to hard work—in increasing production. The people over there, dazed and psychically nervous, are nevertheless learning their lesson, that war doesn't pay. Truth comes slowly. But it'll come, in time. Compared with a year ago, Europe is emphatically in better condition. Her politicians still are eating fire. Time will remedy that also—restore sane leadership.

We have been expecting too much of Europe. Any one who knows history, realizes that it takes years—generations—for people to settle down after a big war.

America hasn't totally recovered yet from the Civil War. Any old-timer, particularly in the southern states, will tell you that the suffering, confusion and bitterness that resulted from the Civil War lasted for years and years. On a smaller scale, we went through what Europe is going through today and will for years to come.

So don't become discouraged when Europe has a natural relapse periodically. Things are moving in the right direction over there—and a lot faster than public affairs lunatics tell us.

As for America today, you'd hardly know we entered the war, except when you go out to buy something or when the tax man calls. Several millions still feel the war keenly, but viewing the nation in a broad way we have practically "recovered." This is demonstrated in the fact that the war is virtually eliminated from our minds. How many days out of a month does our part in the war pop up to your attention? And even then, how many minutes until you brush it aside?

On April 6, 1917, our Congress took action that shaped the whole world's future for centuries to come. That day was a turning of the tide, one of the most gigantic dates in history. We are living too close to it to realize. The world came to a fork in the road. It turned to the right—and is going ahead steadily. Post-war troubles will diminish as the years roll on.

YOUR JUDGMENT

An old man of great historic interest—Thomas W. Shaw—dies at 91, victim of bronchitis, in a hospital at London, Canada. The telegraph wires describe him as the last survivor of the famous Light Brigade which charged the Russian cannon at Balaklava in 1854 during the Crimean War. As a child, you probably recited Tennyson's poem which immortalized the Light Brigade. If it hadn't been for that poem, few of us would know whether the charge of the Light Brigade had to do with a battle or an electric light bill. The poem was bigger than the Light Brigade.

Most important part of the charge by the "valiant 600" was that they willingly went to almost certain death knowing that their orders had been stupidly balled up. As Tennyson put it:

"Forward, the Light Brigade!"
 Was there a man dismayed?
 Not though the soldier knew
 Some one had blundered:

Theirs not to make reply,
 Theirs not to reason why,
 Theirs but to do and die;
 Into the valley of Death
 Rode the six hundred."

Hoo-ray-y-y! Oh, that poem of Tennyson's was great propaganda for the war god. Many a young man has rushed gladly to embrace death in battle, deluded by the false philosophy of this poem. We're getting a little wiser now, and inclined to ask a few questions before carrying out orders, knowing hokum when we see it.

Entirely too much fuss has been made about being dutiful and "obeying orders without question." That's a moron attitude, especially if the person carrying out the orders has the least glimmer of personal intelligence and judgment.

The individual has certain rights, as well as duties, and the propaganda that educates us to obey without question is an inheritance from imperialism. It's the same sort of stuff that was drummed into slaves by their masters.

The private has a right to question his military superior. The citizen has a right to question the edicts of his small group of representatives who constitute the government.

The employee has a right to question his employer. Most employers admit this—and gladly welcome suggestions.

We are free agents, not slaves, despite the propaganda to the contrary that has been accumulating in our literature and schools since imperialism began to fight for existence.

QUEER

Spring fishermen, here's a tip: Fish have a well-developed sense of smell, says a writer in Aquatic Life. Maybe they're smelling when they nose that bait.

Settlers in central Ontario, Canada, say they have to stand behind a stump to bait their hooks when they sprinkle a few drops of oil of rhodium on a can of worms. Ojibway Indians, by the way, claim the best trout bait is a live field mouse, hooked under the spine and allowed to swim freely.

From the rising tide of Volstead prosecution, it doesn't take any prophet to tell that there's going to be trouble brewing in this country.

EDITORIAL REVIEW

Comments reproduced in this column may or may not express the opinion of The Tribune. They are presented here in order that our readers may have both sides of important issues which are being discussed in the press of the day.

ANOTHER CAVELL CASE

Before the bar of humanity and civilization, Soviet Russia stands condemned for the murder of Vice General Butchkevitch, even as Prussian Germany was condemned for the murder of Nurse Edith Cavell. Russian communism, like German militarism, has richly earned universal execration. Both events go down to history as barbaric cruelties palliated neither by political nor military necessity.

In vain the communistic government of Russia answers the protest of civilization that the offense of the Catholic prelate was political and not religious. The event of horror which even blood-stained Moscow announced briefly and reluctantly must be viewed in the light of the declared attitude of the communists to religion, which is avowedly and deliberately hostile. Since the culmination of the revolution the soviet government has studiously followed a policy of atheism and its purpose was manifest. It sought to destroy the influence of conscience, to demolish the hold of religion upon the minds of men and women through the instinctive sense of allegiance to a higher power.

A most illuminating article on this subtle attack on religion, published in Moscow by F. A. McGhie, was printed in The Dispatch on Monday, and reveals the communistic motive. From religion, through the promptings of conscience, is feared the counter-revolution which eventually must overturn the soviet regime. To destroy the influence of church was to postpone, if it could not avert, the inevitable reaction by which Russia will come back to its own. Communism dared not avow the real reason for the murder of Butchkevitch, but substituted the charge of treason and answered the protest of the world that "only organized world capitalism" pleaded for the prelate, and those who voted it "serve the great god gold."

Never in the history of the world has government succeeded by the destruction or chaining of the conscience of men. Russia will know this sooner or later. It can brazen out the slaughter of Monsignor Butchkevitch as Germany did the murder of Edith Cavell, but it will be marked through history by the world's horror and detestation of a bloody and unpardonable crime—St. Paul Pioneer Press.

THE WORLD COURT

To clear the air for those who are not familiar with the status of the international world court which has won the approval of such politically distant people as Woodrow Wilson and Col. Harvey, it may be mentioned that the only connection it has with the League of Nations is that the League elects each member nation having an equal voice—the fifteen judges, who sit for a nine-year term. John Bassett Moore of the U. S. was elected to this bench.

Once formed the court acts independently. The League has no power to review the decisions. The court itself builds up a body of law on which to base these decisions. The decisions do not rest on armed force, but on public opinion emphasized by the prestige of the court, by its integrity, is expected to build up.

This is the whole essential position of the international world court, and its complete connection with the League of Nations—Detroit News.

THE APOSTASY OF TOWNLEY

A. C. Townley, inventor and artifice of the Nonpartisan League is now fain to admit that its showy program of State socialism is a failure, that projects for State ownership of elevators and mills and other enterprises for the benefit of the farmers are "impossible."

Interviewed for the Christian Science Monitor, Mr. Townley frankly recanted the profession of faith which formed the basis for his original fight in North Dakota and which has since been preached in most of the Western States as the saving economic and political gospel.

Mr. Townley has discovered that the farmers' specialty is production, and that the other specialties of the economic system—transportation, distribution and financing—must be left to the specialists who know how, while the farmers stick to his own know-how.

"I for one," he says, "have become convinced that there are forces in the economic system more powerful than the State which make it impossible for State enterprises to succeed."

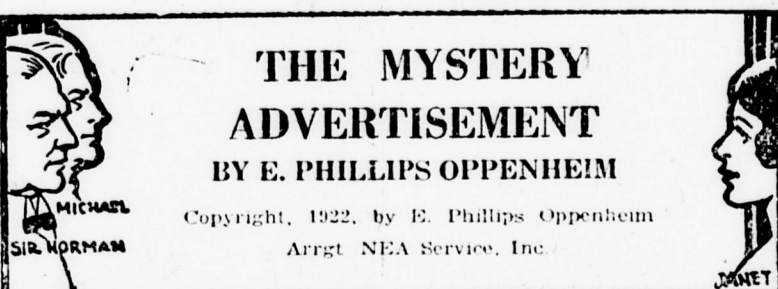

However, the apostasy of Mr. Townley will leave his successors unmoved. They will continue to demand the assumption by the State of economic functions which it is so little fitted to discharge. The radical leaders who have captured the machine he invented and built, will run it as long as they can. They will seek place and power by means of it. They are doing so today in the Minnesota Legislature and other State parliaments.

The only question is, How long will it take the farmers who have been deluded into supporting the Townley machine and relying on the promises made for it, to recover from their delusion?

When they see as clearly as their discarded leader, Mr. Townley, now appears to see, the machine will take its last journey, ending on the scrapheap.

But the evils it has already caused must be paid for in the shape of mounting taxes, as North Dakota is finding out.—Minneapolis Journal.

SOMEONE IS DUE FOR AN AWAKENING

BEGIN HERE TODAY.

Vendetta begins between MICHAEL SAYERS, noted criminal, and SIR NORMAN GREYES, once of Scotland Yard, when Sayers' beautiful housemaid, JANET, saves him from Sir Norman by shooting dead an officer sent to arrest him. Greyes falls in love with Janet and proposes marriage. Michael disguises himself as Captain Escombe and attends the wedding reception. Having stolen a pearl necklace, gift of Sir Norman to his bride, Sayers gives them to her. Beatrice returns to Janet. Michael answers a cipher message published in a paper and buys from the divorced wife of a politician, a bundle of manuscript, evidence against the woman's former husband. Upon reading the manuscript Michael learns that the reputations of a leading politician and Lord Kindersley are in his hands. Sayers plots the best way to turn his prize into money.

NOW GO ON WITH STORY.

Michael Tells Story: "Not on my account," I insisted. "The transaction must remain exactly as it is until I give the word." I rang off, filled my bag, as usual, with stationery-samples and took the tube to Bond Street, whence I walked on to South Audley Street. Upon arrival at my destination, I was informed by an imposing-looking butler that Lord Kindersley was at home, but it was scarcely likely that he would receive me unless I had an appointment. I risked the butler's being human, and bought my way as far as the waiting-room. Once arrived there, I managed to impress an untidy and bespectacled secretary with the idea that it might be worth Lord Kindersley's while to spare me a few minutes of his time. In the end I was ushered into the great man's sanctum.

"What can I do for you—er—Mr. Buckross?" he inquired, glancing at my card.

"I was anxious to test my new identity, and I stood full in the light. It was obvious, however, that Lord Kindersley had not an idea that we had ever met before.

"I have come to see you on a very serious matter, Lord Kindersley," I said, "and I am anxious that there should be no misunderstanding. I do not wish for a penny of your money. I am here, in fact, to save you from the loss of a great deal of it. My visit, nevertheless, has a very serious side."

He looked at me steadily from under his bushy eyebrows.

"Go on," he invited curtly.

"Last March," I continued, "you averted the threatened shipping strike and saved yourself the loss of at least one of your millions by bribing a well-known Labor leader to declare for peace instead of war. You and one other great shipowner were alone concerned in this matter. That other man, I gather, is dead."

Lord Kindersley was staring at me with a queer look in his eyes. His voice, when he answered me, was unsteady.

"What on earth are you talking about?"

"I took the two documents from my pocket and moved a little nearer to him."

"Here," I said, "is Rendall's proposed speech, counselling the strike and signed by the leaders of the various unions. Here, also, is your letter to Rendall, making him the offer of 50,000 pounds to withhold it, which sum was paid to him the next evening at the National Liberal Club."

All the initial affability and condescension had gone from Lord Kindersley's manner. He looked like a man on the verge of a collapse.

"My God!" he muttered. "Rendall swore he had destroyed my letter!"

"He instructed his wife to do so. She retained it for her own purposes. A few months ago her husband divorced her. This is her revenge. She has sold the copy of the speech and the letter to me. I know, also, the other facts in connection with the case."

Lord Kindersley took out his handkerchief and mopped his forehead. Already he began to see his way.

"I will buy those documents from you," he proposed.

"Your Lordship," I replied, "I am not a blackmailer."

"You shall receive the money quite safely," he went on eagerly. "I should not dream of communicating with the police. I shall look upon it as an equitable business transaction. Name your price. I am not a mean man."

"Neither, as I remarked before, am I a blackmailer," I persisted. "My use for these letters is predestined. They go to the press."

Lord Kindersley sprang to his feet.

"Listen," he said impressively: "no newspaper would deal with you as liberally as I am prepared to do. Those documents must not be published. If it were generally known that I had—ah—influenced Rendall to hold up that speech, Labor would declare war against me tomorrow. Not a man would stay in my employ."

Besides, it would bring discredit upon my party. It would ruin me politically as well as actually. Come, now, Mr. Buckross, you look like a business man. Let's talk business. I'll write you a check for ten thousand pounds this morning."

"Your Lordship," I replied, "if I dealt with you in the way you suggest, it would amount to a criminal offense. My conscience forbids it. I can deal with the press fairly and openly. Your political ruin I cannot help. Your financial ruin I may help you to modify. I offer you four days' grace, during which time you had better get rid of as many of your shares in the Kindersley Shipping Company as you can."

"You promise to do nothing for four days?" Lord Kindersley exclaimed eagerly.

"I promise."

He leaned back in his chair and mopped his forehead.

"Well, that's a respite, at any rate," he said. "Now, Mr. Buckross, you and I have got to understand each other on this deal."

"We shall never get any nearer understanding each other than we do at present," I answered him.

"Rubbish!" he answered. "What I want you to do is to get that black-mailing idea out of your head. Look here: stay and have lunch with me, and we'll discuss the matter over a cigar and a glass of wine."

"I should be taking your lunch under false pretenses," I replied, rising and buttoning my coat. "You shall have the four days' grace which I have promised."

He followed me to the door, convinced as he was that I would change my mind, that he sent his secretary out into the street after me. In the end I made my escape by promising to see him again on the evening of the third day.

I took my usual leisurely lunch and afterward made my way to the uninspiring neighborhood of Streatham.

am. "The Towers," which I had discovered from a book of reference to be Mr. Edward Rendall's address, was a hopelessly vulgar edifice of gray stone, approached by what is generally described as a short carriage-drive. The popular M. P., as was his boast, was not in the least difficult of access. He came into the room within a few minutes of a pipe in his mouth, and giving evidence of all the easy good-nature which befitted his position.

"Don't know who you are, Mr. Buckross," he said, noticing with some surprise that I had not availed myself of the opportunity of shaking hands with him, "but sit down, and welcome. What can I do for you?"

"I have brought you bad news, Mr. Rendall," I announced.

"The devil you have," he answered, removing his pipe from his teeth and staring at me. "Who are you, anyway? I don't seem to recognize your name."

"That really doesn't matter," I replied. "You can call me a journalist, if you like. It is as near the truth as anything about myself that I'm likely to tell you. Something very disagreeable is going to happen to you on the fourth day from now, and as I am partly responsible for it, I have come out here to give you a word of warning."

"You're getting at me," he protested uneasily.

"Not in the least," I assured him. "The facts to which I allude are these: I have in my possession a copy of the speech which you ought to have made at Liverpool last March and didn't, and also the original letter from Lord Kindersley, offering you 50,000 pounds to hold it up. I also know that you received that money on the following evening at the National Liberal Club, and I know what banks you intrusted it to."

Rendall was, I believe, at heart, just as much of a coward as Kindersley, but he showed it in a different fashion.

"You lying blackmailer!" he shouted. "How dare you come here with such a story! Get out of the house, or I'll throw you down the steps."

"I have fulfilled my mission," I told him. "I shall be very glad indeed to go."

"Stop!" he shouted as I turned toward the door. "How did you come by this check-and-hill story?"

"It should have come by it at all unless it were the truth!" I answered. "The whole world will know the facts soon enough. I obtained the papers from your wife."

"That's a lie, then," he declared truculently. "For I saw her destroy the letter."

I smiled. The man, after all, was a poor sport.

"She deceived you," I replied. "You saw her destroy a circular. She kept the letter. Perhaps she had her reasons. I bought it from her and another man at Frascati's restaurant last night."

Conviction seized upon Mr. Edward Rendall. His eyes narrowed a little.

"How do I know that the whole thing isn't a bluff?" he said suspiciously. "Have you got the documents with you?"

"I have," I told him.

He attempted nothing in the way of subtlety. He replied, I suppose, upon his six feet and his brawny shoulders. He came at me like a bull, head down and fist swinging. It was a very ridiculous encounter.

ADVENTURE OF THE TWINS

By Olive Barton Roberts

The next person the Twins saw in Sugar-Plum and was the Gingerbread Man.

There he was in his red tarlatan coat with fringe, but it was candy box paper and red cinnamon drops for buttons. His crown was a tin biscuit cutter and his scepter a rolling pin he sat on a throne made of cracker boxes.

For the Gingerbread Man was king in Sugar-Plum land and was all the laws for the Sugar-Plum Landers.

Six chocolate soldiers stood on each side of him with ticks of candy for guns. Some had guns with red stripes, some with yellow stripes and some were both red and yellow. Olypps grow all around, and fountains splashed different colored sodas. The grass was made of green straw out of Easter baskets.

But for all that the Gingerbread Man did not look happy. His crown was on crooked and his coat was up about his ears, and his raisin eyes looked as cross as a multiplication mark.

"Excuse me, Your Majesty," said the Chocolate Soldier nearest to him. "But you're all crooked again!"

"I know it," grumbled the Gingerbread Man. "It's these buttons on my coat. They are as crooked as a dog's hind leg. And when I wear crooked clothes I think crooked and feel crooked. My feelings always match my looks. There! I'm going to make another law! I feel it coming. Yes, sir! If I don't make it I'll burst. It's inside of me. I'll have to make this law at once."

"Very well, sir!" the Chocolate Soldier said patiently. "If you'll tell me the law, sir, I'll take a trumpet and go out and tell everybody."

"All right!" said the Gingerbread Man. "The law is that everybody must walk on his head for a week."

"My goodness!" Nancy couldn't help exclaiming. "That's a funny law. How can people obey it?"

"Nobody obeys my laws," said the Gingerbread Man. "So I can make as many as I like."

Follies Girl May Marry Royalty

LETTER FROM SYDNEY CARTON, BACHELOR, TO HIS ENGAGED FRIEND, JOHN ALDEN PRESCOTT

I hope you have been more successful than I, Jack, old man. I think, however, you made a mistake in going back to obtain those letters. I'm almost sure that the old man, Leslie's father, suspects that there is a hole somewhere in the importance of that business proposition. He will be sure some day to find out. Right here, let me tell you that I have hard work to keep Leslie from writing a letter to your firm, telling them she didn't think they were very nice to send for you. If she had done this the fat would have been in the fire. Somewhere I have an indistinct recollection of someone saying we weave very tangled webs when we begin the ugly pattern of deception. I think you're all wrong about the little Perrier. I mean going back to those letters. In the first place, she will attach a great deal more importance to them than they deserve if they contain nothing more than you have told me.

I like you, Leslie, John, and I believe if I were standing in your shoes I would promptly go down on my knees and, telling her the whole story, ask her to forgive me.

Women like to forgive, John, it is about the only time in a woman's life that she can exercise the absolutely super-human quality of magnanimity. It is a virtue that means seldom have a chance to practice, even when they have the greatness to be able to do so it called upon.

With all deference to you, my boy, I cannot understand why Miss Hamilton took you instead of Karl Whitney. That man Whitney is pure gold. Rich, handsome, a real man. Some girl is going to get a jewel when she marries him. Being only an outsider, I cannot understand why she passed Whitney over and took you. I do not believe that Whitney ever thought of me. I say to me perhaps that is the reason why she took you. I do not believe that women like experience in men any more than men like it in women.

Anyway I'll be sorry for you if the time ever comes when she snubs you. You have had to her about your youthful peccadilloes and contrasts, you with the splendid "one-woman's man" that I already know.

You are probably wondering why I'm telling you all this. It sounds like a meddlesome woman, doesn't it? But the other night at the fancy dress party my mask had become rather uncomfortable and besides, I wanted to smoke, so taking it off I seated myself in a darkness.

CONEDY AND DRAMA HAPPILY BLENDED IN LATEST MIX PICTURE

Starting tonight there will be shown at the Capitol Theatre for a two day run, the Fox production, "Romance Land," starring Tom Mix. Advance reports received on this picture qualify it as an excellent entertainment. Acting, direction and photography are of a high caliber, and the picture, according to the producer, is filled with dramatic incident and left touches of comedy.

It is a story of a man and a maid who become inspired by the adventures set forth in Walter Scott's "Ivanhoe" and in the tales of King Arthur. They come to believe that chivalry and honor should be shown as in the days when knight-hood was in flower.

The situations are said to be replete with excitement, and the entire plot well handled. If this screen effort is as good as the others in which Tom Mix has appeared, the Capitol Theatre will play to capacity crowds, especially in view of the producer's promise of an exceptional photoplay.

CUT THIS OUT—IT IS WORTH MONEY.

Put out this slip, enclose with 5c and mail it to Foley & Co., 2835 Sheffield Ave., Chicago, Ill., writing your name and address clearly. You will receive in return a trial package containing Foley's Hot and Iar Compound for coughs, colds and croup; Foley Kidney Pills for pains in sides and back; rheumatism, backache, kidney and bladder ailments; and Foley Cathartic Tablets, a wholesome and thoroughly cleansing cathartic for constipation, biliousness, headaches, and sluggish bowels.

Now, a Quick Quaker Oats

Cooks in 3 to 5 minutes

The quickest cooking oats in the world

Now your grocer has Quaker Oats in two styles. One the kind you have always known—the other is Quick Quaker.

Quick Quaker cooks in from 3 to 5 minutes. And it cooks to perfection. So it is almost like a ready-cooked dish.

No other oat flakes on the market cook anywhere near so quickly. The two styles are identical in quality and flavor. Both are flaked from the finest grains only—just the rich, plump, flaky oats. A bushel of choice oats yields but ten pounds of these delicious flakes.

But in Quick Quaker the oats are cut before flaking. They are rolled very thin and partly cooked. So the flakes are smaller and thinner—that is all. And those small, thin flakes cook quickly.

Ask for Quick Quaker if you want this style. Your grocer has both. But always get Quaker Oats for their delightful flavor.

LETTER FROM SYDNEY CARTON, BACHELOR TO HIS ENGAGED FRIEND, JOHN ALDEN PRESCOTT

I hope you have been more successful than I, Jack, old man. I think, however, you made a mistake in going back to obtain those letters. I'm almost sure that the old man, Leslie's father, suspects that there is a hole somewhere in the importance of that business proposition. He will be sure some day to find out. Right here, let me tell you that I have had to work to keep Leslie from writing a letter to your firm, telling them she didn't think they were very nice to send for you. If she had done this the fat would have been in the fire. Somewhere I have an indistinct recollection of someone saying we weave very tangled webs when we begin the ugly pattern of deception. I think you're all wrong about the little Perier, I mean going back to get those letters. In the first place, she will attach a great deal more importance to them than they deserve if they contain nothing more than you have told me.

I like you Leslie, John, and I believe if I were standing in your shoes I would promptly go down on my knees and, telling her the whole story, ask her to forgive me. Women like to forgive, John, it is about the only time in a woman's life that she can exercise the absolutely super-human quality of magnanimity. It is a virtue that humans seldom have a chance to practice, even when they are in the greatest need to be able to do so it called upon.

With all deference to you, my boy, I cannot understand why Miss Hamilton took you instead of Karl Whitney. That man Whitney is pure gold. Rich, handsome, and real. Some girl is going to get a jewel when she marries him. Being only an outsider, I cannot understand why she passed Whitney over and took you. I do not believe that Whitney has ever thought of another woman in all his life. Don't you see, John, that is the reason why she took you. I do not believe that women like experience in men any more than men like it in women.

Anyway I'll be sorry for you if the time ever comes when she finds out that you have lied to her about your youthful peccadillo and contrasts you with the splendid "one-woman's man" that I already know Karl Whitney to be.

You are probably wondering why I'm telling you all this. It sounds like I'm meddling, but I don't see it. But the other night at the fancy dress party my mask had become rather uncomfortable and besides I wanted to smoke, so taking it off I seated myself in a dark corner just outside the conservatory behind a great screen of roses. This screen was so dense and fragrant that I thought the smoke from my cigar would neither penetrate the nostrils nor be seen by any passerby. I did not dream that any two people would seat themselves on the other side of it for a confidential chat and when, to my consternation, a clown and columbine came strolling by and sat down there, I just drew myself into as small a space as possible and waited, as I thought they would not stay very long.

The clown was speaking and I heard him say—"Yes, it is always so. Columbine goes dancing away into the arms of the other man and the poor clown must hide his breaking heart under his sorry jest and smile, for his is the business of making others happy—it matters not that his soul be bowed with grief and sadness."

The girl's voice trembled and I knew it was Leslie. And then it came over me that the clown was Karl Whitney and he had taken the way of telling her that he was broken-hearted at her marriage. "Probably the girl is not worth the blotting out of one of the clown's smiles," he said, and then she whispered almost to herself—"It's a sad little story, isn't it—that story that is told in almost every language of Pierrot and Pierrette, or the Clown and Columbine. Do you know, Mr. Clown, I've always felt sorrier for the girl than for the man, for if you will remember, she lived to find her love a sham while he could keep his illusion always in his heart. It was a dream, a beautiful dream, from which he never awakened."

The clown got up roughly, it almost seemed to me that he could stand no more. Neither of these two people had formally disclosed his or her identity to the other, but I had been in at the death, Jack, I had been listening to the service over the burial of love and I confess when I thought of you perhaps looking over a glass of champagne at the little Perier and trying to beguile her into giving you the evidence of former follies, I wasn't proud of you.

There, boy, it is always the prerogative of a real friend to say harsh things. Come on, marry your little princess and become a decent member of society, make a family and live happy ever after.

Your friend, SYD.

THE STATE'S OLDEST NEWSPAPER
(Established 1873)

KISMET—APRIL 6

Six years ago this April 6, the United States declared war on Germany. We won't bore you with a lot of cheap oratory about what our country did in the war—such things as statistics and the force we exerted in swinging the decision. These things, you already know. Or, to be more precise, each of us has his individual opinion.

On this April 6, your thoughts swing out and contemplate the world as the war left it—Europe, in particular.

Things still are messed up badly. But they're steadily getting untangled. Europe is returning to hard work—increasing production. The people over there, dazed and psychically nervous, are nevertheless learning their lesson, that war doesn't pay. Truth comes slowly. But it'll come, in time. Compared with a year ago, Europe is emphatically in better condition. Her politicians still are eating fire. Time will remedy that also—restore sane leadership.

We have been expecting too much of Europe. Any one who knows history, realizes that it takes years—generations—for people to settle down after a big war.

America hasn't totally recovered yet from the Civil War. Any old-timer, particularly in the southern states, will tell you that the suffering, confusion and bitterness that resulted from the Civil War lasted for years and years. On a smaller scale, we went through what Europe is going through today and will for years to come.

So don't become discouraged when Europe has a natural relapse periodically. Things are moving in the right direction over there—and a lot faster than public affairs lunatics tell us.

As for America today, you'd hardly know we entered the war, except when you go out to buy something or when the tax man calls. Several millions still feel the war keenly, but viewing the nation in a broad way we have practically "recovered." This is demonstrated in the fact that the war is virtually eliminated from our minds. How many days out of a month does our part in the war pop up to your attention? And even then, how many minutes until you brush it aside?

On April 6, 1917, our Congress took action that shaped the whole world's future for centuries to come. That day was a turning of the tide, one of the most gigantic dates in history. We are living too close to it to realize. The world came to a fork in the road. It turned to the right—and is going ahead steadily. Post-war troubles will diminish as the years roll on.

YOUR JUDGMENT

An old man of great historic interest—Thomas W. Shaw—dies at 91, victim of bronchitis, in a hospital at London, Canada. The telegraph wires describe him as the last survivor of the famous Light Brigade which charged the Russian cannon at Balaklava in 1854 during the Crimean War.

As a child, you probably recited Tennyson's poem which immortalized the Light Brigade. If it hadn't been for that poem, few of us would know whether the charge of the Light Brigade had to do with a battle or an electric light bill. The poem was bigger than the Light Brigade.

Most important part of the charge by the "valiant 600" was that they willingly went to almost certain death knowing that their orders had been stupidly balled up. As Tennyson put it:

"Forward, the Light Brigade!"
"Was there a man dismayed?"
"Not though the soldier knew
Some one had blundered."

There's not to make reply.
There's not to reason why.
There's but to do and die.
Into the Valley of Death
Rode the six hundred."

Hoo-ray-y-y! Oh, that poem of Tennyson's was great propaganda for the war god. Many a young man has rushed gladly to embrace death in battle, deluded by the false philosophy of this poem. We're getting a little wiser now, and inclined to ask a few questions before carrying out orders, knowing hokum when we see it.

Entirely too much fuss has been made about being dutiful and "obeying orders without question." That's a moron attitude, especially if the person carrying out the orders has the least glimmer of personal intelligence and judgment.

The individual has certain rights, as well as duties, and the propaganda that educates us to obey without question is an inheritance from imperialism. It's the same sort of stuff that was drummed into slaves by their masters.

The private has a right to question his military superior. The citizen has a right to question the edicts of his small group of representatives who constitute the government.

The employee has a right to question his employer. Most employers admit this—and gladly welcome suggestions.

We are free agents, not slaves, despite the propaganda to the contrary that has been accumulating in our literature and schools since imperialism began to fight for existence.

QUEER

Spring fishermen, here's a tip: Fish have a well-developed sense of smell, says a writer in Aquatic Life. Maybe they're smelling when they nose that bait.

Settlers in central Ontario, Canada, say they have to stand behind a stump to bait their hooks when they sprinkle a few drops of oil of rhodium on a can of worms. Ojibway Indians, by the way, claim the best trout bait is a live field mouse, hooked under the spine and allowed to swim freely.

From the rising tide of Volstead prosecution, it doesn't take any prophet to tell that there's going to be trouble brewing in this country.

EDITORIAL REVIEW

Comments reproduced in this column may not express the opinion of The Tribune. They are presented here in order that our readers may have both sides of important issues which are being discussed in the press of the day.

ANOTHER CAVELL CASE

Before the bar of humanity and civilization, Soviet Russia stands condemned for the murder of Vladimir General Butskavitch even as Prussian Germany was condemned for the murder of Nurse Edith Cavell. Russian communism, like German militarism, has richly earned universal execration. Both events go down to history as barbaric cruelties palliated neither by political nor military necessity.

In vain the communistic government of Russia answers the prompt of civilization that the offense of the Catholic prelate was political and not religious. The event of horror which even blood-saturated Moscow announced briefly and reluctantly must be viewed in the light of the declared attitude of the communists to religion, which is, avowedly and deliberately, to destroy the civilization of the world. Since the culmination of the revolution the soviet government has studiously followed a policy of atheism and its purpose was manifest. It sought to destroy the influence of conscience, to diminish the hold of religion upon the minds of men and women through the instinctive sense of allegiance to a higher power.

A most illuminating article on this subtle attack on religion, which has been the backbone of civilization since the slaughter of Monsignor Butskavitch, is given in The Dispatch on Monday, and reveals the communistic motive. From religion, through the promptings of conscience, is feared the counter-revolution which eventually must overturn the soviet regime. To destroy the influence of church was to postpone, if it could not avert, the inevitable reaction by which Russia will come back to its own. Communism dared not avow the real reason for the murder of Butskavitch, but substituted the charge of treason and ordered the parade of the world that "only organized world capitalism" pleaded for the prelate and those who valued it "serve the great god gold."

Never in the history of the world has government succeeded by the destruction or chaining of the conscience of men. Russia will know this sooner or later. It can brazen out the slaughter of Monsignor Butskavitch as Germany did the murder of Edith Cavell, but it will be pursued through history by the world's horror and detestation of a bloody and unpardonable crime. St. Paul Pioneer Press.

THE WORLD COURT

To clear the air for those who are not familiar with the status of the international world court which has won the approval of such politically distant people as Woodrow Wilson and Col. Harvey, we mention that the only connection it has with the League of Nations is that the League elects each member nation having an equal voice—the fifteen judges, who sit for a nine-year term. John Bassett Moore of the U. S. was elected to this bench.

One formed the court acts independently. The League has no power to review the decisions. The court itself builds up a body of law on which to base these decisions. The decision, do not rest on armed force, but on public opinion emphasized by the prestige of the court, by its integrity, is expected to build up.

This is the whole essence of position of the international world court, and its complete connection with the League of Nations. Detroit News.

THE APOSTASY OF TOWNLEY

A. C. Townley, inventor and author of the Nonpartisan League is now fairly to admit that it is a failure, that projects for State ownership of elevators and mills and other enterprises for the benefit of the farmers are "impossible."

Interviewed for the Christian Science Monitor, Mr. Townley frankly admitted the failure of his original plan in North Dakota and which has since been pitched in most of the Western States as the saving, economic and political gospel.

Mr. Townley has discovered that the farmers' specialty is production, and that the other specialties of the economic system—transportation, distribution and financing—must be left to the specialists who know how, while the farmer, sticks to his own know-how.

"I find one," he says, "has become convinced that there are forces in the economic system more powerful than the State which make it impossible for State enterprises to succeed."

However, the apostasy of Mr. Townley will leave his successors unmoved. They will continue to demand the assumption by the State of economic functions which it is so little fitted to discharge. The radical leaders who have captured the machine have intended and built, will run it as long as they can. They will seek place and power by means of it. They are doing so today in the Minnesota Legislature and other State parliaments.

The only question is, how long will it take the farmers who have been deluded into supporting the Townley machine and relying on the promises made for it, to recover from their delusion?

(When they see as clearly as their discerning) Mr. Townley, now taking its last journey, ending on the scrapheap.

But the evils it has already caused must be paid for in the shape of mounting taxes, — as North Dakota is finding out. — Minneapolis Journal.

SOMEONE IS DUE FOR AN AWAKENING

THE MYSTERY ADVERTISEMENT

BY E. PHILLIPS OPPENHEIM

Copyright, 1922, by E. Phillips Oppenheim

Arragt. NEA Service, Inc.

BEGIN HERE TODAY.

Vendetta begins between MICHAEL SAYERS, noted criminal, and SIR NORMAN GREYES, once of Scotland Yard, when Sayers' beautiful housemaid, JANET, saves him from Sir Norman by shooting dead an officer sent to arrest him. Greyes falls in love with Janet and proposes marriage.

Michael disguises himself as Colonel Escombe and attends the wedding reception. Having stolen a pearl necklace, gift of Sir Norman to his wife, Sayers gives them to her. He returns to Janet. Michael answers a cipher message published in a paper and buys from the divorced wife of a politician, a bundle of manuscript, evidence against the woman's former husband. Upon reading the manuscript Michael learns that the reputations of leading politicians and Lord Kindersley are in his hands. Sayers ponders the best way to turn his prize into money.

NOW GO ON WITH STORY.

Michael Tells Story: "Not on my account," I insisted. "The transaction must remain secret. It is until I give the word."

I came off, filled my bag, as usual, with stationery samples and took the tube to Bond Street, whence I walked on to South Audley Street.

Upon arrival at my destination, I was informed by an imposing-looking butler that Lord Kindersley was at home, but it was scarcely likely that he would receive me unless I had an appointment. I risked the butler's being human, and bought my way as far as the waiting-room. Once arrived there, I managed to impress an untidy and bespectacled secretary with the idea that it might be worth Lord Kindersley's while to spare me a few minutes of his time. In the end I was ushered into the great man's sanctum.

"What can I do for you—sir? Mr. Buckross?" he inquired, glancing at my card.

I was anxious to test my new identity, and I stood full in the light. It was obvious, however, that Lord Kindersley had not an idea that we had ever met before.

"I have come to see you on a very serious matter, Lord Kindersley," I said, "and I am anxious that there should be no misunderstanding. I do not wish for a penny of your money. I am here, in fact, to save you from the loss of a great deal of it. My visit, nevertheless, has a very serious side."

He looked at me steadily from under his bushy eyebrows. "Go on," he invited curtly.

"Last March," he threatened shipping, I said, "I was threatened with the loss of at least one of your millions by bidding a well-known Labor leader to declare for peace instead of war. You and one other great shipowner were alone concerned in this matter. That other man, I gather, is dead."

Lord Kindersley was staring at me with a queer look in his eyes. His voice, when he answered me, was unsteady.

"What on earth are you talking about?" I took the two documents from my pocket and moved a little nearer to him.

Kindersley's manner. He looked like a man on the verge of a collapse.

"My God!" he muttered. "Randall swore he had destroyed my letter!" He instructed his wife to do so. She returned it for her husband's disposal. A few months ago her husband divorced her. This is her revenge. She has held the copy of the speech and the letter to me. I know, also, the other facts in connection with the case."

Lord Kindersley took out his handkerchief and mopped his forehead. Already he began to see his way.

"I will give those documents from you," he proposed.

"Your Lordship," I replied, "I am not a blackmailer."

"You shall receive the money quite safely," he went on eagerly. "I should not dream of communicating with the police. I shall look upon it as an equitable business transaction. Name your price. I am not a mean man."

"Neither, as I remarked before, am I a blackmailer," I persisted. "My use for these letters is predestined. They go to the press."

Lord Kindersley sprang to his feet. "Listen," he said impressively: "no newspaper would deal with you as liberally as I am prepared to do. These documents must not be published. If it were generally known that I had—ah—influenced Randall to hold up that speech, Labor would declare war against me tomorrow. Not a man would stay in my employ."

"I took my usual leisurely lunch and afterward made my way to the uninspiring neighborhood of Streath-

Besides, it would bring discredit upon my party. It would ruin me politically as well as actually. Come, now, Mr. Buckross, you look like a business man. Let's talk business. I'll write you a check for ten thousand pounds this morning."

"Your Lordship," I replied, "if I dealt with you in the way you suggest, it would amount to a criminal offense. My conscience forbids it. I can deal with the press fairly and openly. Your political ruin I cannot help. Your financial ruin I can help you to modify. I offer you four days' grace, during which time you had better get rid of as many of your shares in the Kindersley Shipping Company as you can."

"You promise to do nothing for four days?" Lord Kindersley exclaimed eagerly.

"I promise."

He leaned back in his chair and mopped his forehead.

"Well, that's a respite, at any rate," he said. "Now, Mr. Buckcross, you and I have got to understand each other on this deal."

"We shall never get any nearer understanding each other than we do at present," I answered him.

"Rubbish!" he answered. "What I want you to do is to get that blackmailing idea out of your head. Look here: stay and have lunch with me, and we'll discuss the matter over a cigar and a glass of wine."

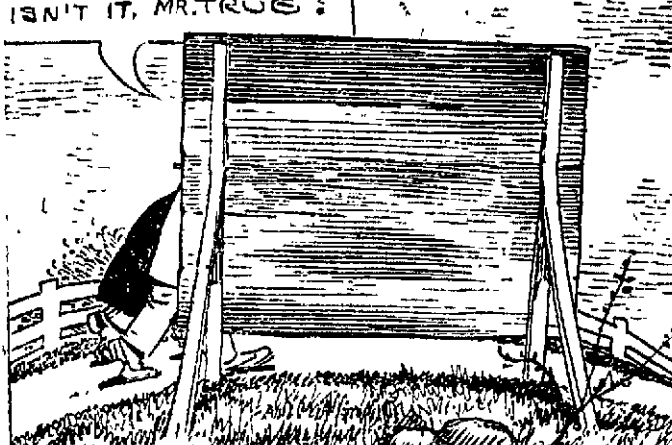

"I should be taking your lunch under false pretenses," I replied, rising and buttoning my coat. "You shall have the four days' grace which I have promised."

He followed me to the door, entreating me for my address. So convinced was he that I would change out into the street after me. In the end I made my escape by promising to see him again on the evening of the third day.

"I took my usual leisurely lunch and afterward made my way to the uninspiring neighborhood of Streath-

EVERETT TRUE BY CONDO

WHOOEE, THAT'S QUITE A CLIMB TO GET UP HERE, ISN'T IT, MR. TRUE?

am. "The Towers," which I had discovered from a book of reference to be Mr. Edward Randall's address, was a hopelessly vulgar edifice of gray stone, approached by what is generally described as a short carriage-drive. The popular M. P., as was his boast, was not in the least difficult of access. He came into the room within a few minutes, a pipe in his mouth and giving evidence of all the easy good-nature which befitted his position.

"Don't know who you are, Mr. Buckcross," he said, noticing with some surprise that I had not availed myself of the opportunity of shaking hands with him, "but sit down, and welcome. What can I do for you?"

"I have brought you bad news, Mr. Randall," I announced.

"The devil you have," he answered, removing his pipe from his teeth and staring at me. "Who are you, anyway? I don't seem to recognize your name."

"That really doesn't matter," I replied. "You can call me a journalist, if you like. As a near neighbor, I have in my possession a copy of the speech which you ought to have made at Liverpool last March and didn't, and also the original letter from Lord Kindersley, offering you 50,000 pounds to hold it up. I also know that you received that money on the following evening at the National Liberal Club, and I know what banks you intrusted it to."

Randall was, I believe, at heart, just as much of a coward as Kindersley, but he showed it in a different fashion.

"You lying blackmailer!" he shouted. "How dare you come here with such a story! Get out of the house, or I'll throw you down the steps."

"I have fulfilled my mission," I told him. "I shall be very glad indeed to go."

"Stop!" he shouted as I turned toward the door. "How did you come by this cock-and-bull story?"

"How should I have come by it at all unless it were the truth?" I answered. "The whole world will know the facts soon enough. I obtained the papers from your wife."

"That's a lie, then," he declared truculently. "For I saw her destroy the letter."

I smiled. The man, after all, was a poor sport.

"She deceived you," I replied. "You saw her destroy a circular. She kept the letter. Perhaps she had her reasons. I bought it from her and another man at Fruscati's restaurant last night."

Conviction seized upon Mr. Edward Randall. His eyes narrowed a little.

"How do I know that the whole thing isn't a bluff?" he said suspiciously. "Have you got the documents with you?"

"I have," I told him.

He attempted nothing in the way of subtlety. He replied, I suppose, upon his six feet and his brawny shoulders. He came at me like a bull, head down and fist swinging. It was a very ridiculous encounter.

The city park commission of Mandan, it was announced today, plans to establish a municipal pier and bathhouse on the Heart River. The old Country Club property, turned over to the park commission, will be used. It will be refitted as a municipal clubhouse.

KNOWS NEW MAYOR

The election of Frank Doremus as mayor of Detroit, Mich., following a tense political battle, is of especial interest to Dr. R. M. Erwin of this city. Dr. Erwin spent his childhood in the same town as Frank Doremus, Lake City, Mich., and was recalling today the time when he tumbled off a pier into Lake Michigan in 20 feet of water and Doremus Sr., the new mayor of Detroit by means of a fishpole towed him from the end of the pier to shallow water at the shore line and saved his life.

ADVENTURE OF THE TWINS

By Olive Barton Roberts

The next person the Twins saw in Sugar-Plum and was the Gingerbread Man.

There he was in his red tarlatan coat with frills made out of candy box paper and red cinnamon drops for buttons. His crown was a tin biscuit cutter and his scepter a rolling pin he sat on a throne made of cracker boxes.

For the Gingerbread Man was king in Sugar-Plum Land and made all the laws for the Sugar-Plum Landers.

Six chocolate soldiers stood on each side of him with ticks of candy for guns. Some had guns with red stripes, some with yellow stripes and some were both red and yellow. Olyopops grew all around, and fountains splashed different colored sodas. The grass was made of green straw out of Easter baskets.

But for all that the Gingerbread Man did not look happy. His crown was on crooked and his coat was up about his ears, and his raven eyes looked as cross as a multiplication mark.

"Excuse me, Your Majesty," said the Chocolate Soldier nearest to him. "But you're all crooked again!"

"I know it," grumbled the Gingerbread Man. "It's these buttons on my coat. They are as crooked as a dog's hind leg. And when I went crooked clothes think crooked feet crooked. My feelings couldn't match my looks. There! I'm going to make another law! I feel it coming. Yes, sir! If I don't make it I'll burst. It's inside of me. I'll have to 'make this law at once.'"

"Very well, sir," the Chocolate Soldier said patiently. "If you'll tell me the law, sir, I'll take a trumpet and go out and tell everybody."

"All right!" said the Gingerbread Man. "The law is that everybody must walk on his head for a week."

"My goodness!" the Chocolate Soldier exclaimed. "That's a funny law. How can people obey it?"

"Nobody obeys my laws," said the Gingerbread Man, "so I can make as many as I like."

SPORTS

ORDEMAN AND RODGERS WILL MEET ON MAT

Athletic Carnival to be Given Here for Benefit of Baseball Club

Stanley Rodgers of Bismarck and Henry Ordeinan of Minneapolis, former American champion, will be headliners in an athletic carnival to be held in Bismarck on the night of April 12 at the Bismarck Auditorium for the benefit of the Bismarck baseball association. It was announced today. Rodgers has not met defeat in many months and has met some of the best heavyweight wrestlers in the Northwest. Ordeinan has long ranked as one of the top-notchers among American wrestlers.

Sia Jackson of Minot will box Joe Mong of Medina six rounds. Thor Jensen, local wrestler, agrees to throw any three local men selected in 20 minutes or forfeit $25.

O. W. Roberts will referee the bouts.

A big attendance, it was said, will help the athletic club to clean up its debts and enable Bismarck to have good baseball this summer.

Leonard to Battle Freezmann in Bout

Chicago, April 6.—Sailor Freezmann, Chicago lightweight, will enter the squared circle with Benny Leonard, world champion lightweight, in a titular match of 15 rounds at the polo grounds in New York July 2, it became known here today.

Freezmann said he had signed articles for the match and posted $2,500 to make the required 125, eight hours before the bout.

Albania Shuns Turkey; Turns Toward West

Tirana, Albania, April 6.—Little Albania, with her narrow strip of mountainous territory and her scant one million people, rebels against paying any of the debt of Turkey for the reason that the former Ottoman Empire, after collecting its tribute here, never so much as built a bridge, constructed a road, or erected a school, according to members of the newly constituted Albanian parliament, which has been meeting in laborious sittings since the New Year.

The sum assigned to Albania for payment was 750,000 gold francs, or about $150,000, but this sum, the deputies say, would make a very serious drain on the public finances.

Albania is still the wild and undeveloped country she has always been without a mile of railroad, almost impassable roads and but one or two schools at most. The government, constituted on the order of a republic, is bending every effort to collect sufficient revenue to meet the annual expenditures, figured at 18,000,000 gold francs, or about $3,600,000, which represents but a fraction of what the United States government spends in a single day.

Though there is a great deal of Turkish influence left in this small and primitive country, the present tendency is to throw off all of the Ottoman bonds and lean toward Western civilization. Instead of sending their sons to Constantinople for their professional training, the well-to-do now send them to Paris, London and Rome. Even in dress the tendency is to turn to the West for leadership.

THE YOUTHFUL MR. MITCHELL

John Kearsley Mitchell, identified as the mysterious "Mr. Marshall," lavish spender and admirer of Dorothy King, slain Broadway beauty, is 52 but retains all the enthusiasm of youth. Here he is engaged in a strenuous tennis match at Philadelphia where he is a member of many clubs.

Detroit Castoffs Have Become Stars After Joining Cincinnati Reds

Jim Roberts, a big, husky pitcher, who is trying for a berth on the Cincinnati staff, has a fine chance to come through if precedent means anything.

The precedent is that Jim Roberts for a couple of months was a member of the Detroit team and was sent back to the minors without any strings on him.

Detroit castoffs have been unusually successful with the Cincinnati club.

Babe Pinelli, who failed to impress Detroit as a third sacker, and was sent back to the coast, got his third big league trial with the Reds, and now is rated one of the best players in the National League at that position.

Johnny Couch, who had a big year in 1922, and who by his great work keeps the Reds in the race during the early part of the season, had his first big league opportunity with Detroit and was sent back.

George Harper, who the Reds say, is one of the best hitters in the National League, was carried for a couple of seasons by Jennings when he was in charge of Detroit, but finally turned loose as lacking big league class.

Cobb, when he played in the Winter Coast League, was favorably impressed by Caveney, who starred as short for the Reds last year. He offered a fancy price for him but finally decided Caveney wasn't worth the money asked and quit bidding in favor of the Reds.

Ball players, always superstitious, are inclined to feel that Roberts' failure to make good at Detroit means that he will surely deliver for Cincinnati.

"NO SMOKING" IS RULE AT THE GREAT CLEVELAND PUBLIC HALL

By NEA Service.

Cleveland, O., April 5.—An evening of boxing in the Public Hall here presents a spectacle well worth going far to see.

The boxing itself isn't of the caliber to become madly excited about, in fact, it is rather second-class. This is due, of course, to the municipal ruling which permits amateur bouts only. So that the boys who mix it are unknown outside of Cleveland.

But aside from that—caramba! Public Hall is one of the biggest things of its kind. At one far corner is a magnificent stage, a really huge thing. Here a jazz band plays. The floor, with the ring in the center, is immense, and above its sides and rear rise in graceful loops a majestic balcony, so spacious that the corners very look are almost lost in shadows. The entire auditorium is said to seat 15,000.

No smoking is permitted, and a liberal supply of bluecoats are on hand to enforce the ruling. Very little of the usual yelling, so closely associated with boxing matches in the past, may be heard. Spectators vent their passions with mild hand-clapping.

It is as easy to get your correct seat at one of these shows—and any prize fight fan will appreciate this—as it is at any legitimate theatrical production.

In other words, Cleveland now has the best hall for boxing matches, and the best manner of handling them of any city in the country, those who have been there declare.

BANDITS MAKE BIG HAUL IN BANK ROBBERY

St. Louis, April 6.—Registered bonds of the St. Joseph Federal Land Bank amounting to $2,139,500 were in the loot obtained by five bandits who last Monday morning held up a mail truck in the heart of the down town business section according to information obtained this afternoon by the St. Louis Post Dispatch.

The bonds printed in Washington were sent to banks here. They lacked the signature of the vice president and secretary of the banks, but the authorities thought the bandits would forge the signature, the Dispatch said.

A total of other bonds taken it was learned by the Post Dispatch was $225,000 of which $1,250 at least were negotiable.

KLAN AFFAIRS IN UNCERTAIN STATUS

Atlanta, Ga., April 6.—Internal affairs of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan continued in uncertain status while the court of Judge E. J. Thomas was occupied with arguments of the counsel on the order of Judge Thomas that W. J. Simmons, emperor of the Klan called, by injunction brought by him and his supporters last Monday should not be dismissed. The injunction sought to displace Dr. Wm. Evans from office of imperial wizard, executive head of the organization.

More Light--- Better Business For the Publisher

THE more light the publisher gives the advertiser on his publication—the greater consideration he receives when it comes to placing advertising.

The facts embodied in an A. B. C. report are those which the advertiser wants to know—facts that he must know to buy space intelligently. He cannot afford the time or expense necessary to collect them either by correspondence with the publisher or by financing his own investigation.

Therefore, the uniform, easily-accessible A. B. C. form, packed with complete dependable facts, is a ready solution to the problem of how to locate the most desirable mediums with the minimum of effort and expense.

The long-established commercial rating agencies have furnished financial information for years. Banks are audited periodically. The Audit Bureau of Circulations performs a similar function by collecting and verifying circulation information for the advertiser.

Publishers subscribing to the A. B. C. standards are helping to stabilize and organize advertising in the way that, by long experience in other commercial lines, has proved to be Good Business.

WHEAT AGAIN IS STRONG ON CHICAGO MART

After Wavering Start Price Climbs During the Early Dealings

Chicago, April 6.—Despite a wavering start wheat turned upward in price toward during the early dealings. Freezing temperature and lack of moisture in part of the winter crop territory puts bears at a disadvantage. On the other hand declines in Liverpool quotations, following an earlier advance, had a temporarily unsettling effect here. The opening, which varied from one-eighth cent off to one-eighth cent near with May, $1.21 1/2 to $1.21 3/4 and July, $1.18 1/4 to $1.18 3/4, was succeeded by a slight general setback and then a rise all around to well above yesterday's finish.

Subsequently persistent buying in small lots was taken to indicate a broadening speculative interest. July and September touched a new high price record for the season. Close was firm at the same as yesterday, finish, to 3/4 higher, May, $1.21 1/2 to $1.21 3/4 and July, $1.18 1/4 to $1.18 3/4.

ORDEMAN AND RODGERS WILL MEET ON MAT

Athletic Carnival to be Given Here for Benefit of Baseball Club

Stanley Rodgers of Bismarck and Henry Ordeinan of Minneapolis, former American champion, will be headliners in an athletic carnival to be held in Bismarck on the night of April 12 at the Bismarck Auditorium for the benefit of the Bismarck baseball association, it was announced today. Rodgers has not met defeat in many months and has met some of the best heavyweight wrestlers in the Northwest. Ordeinan has long ranked as one of the top-notchers among American wrestlers. Sid Jackson of Minot will box Joe Mour of Medina six rounds. Thor Jensen, local wrestler, agrees to throw any three local men selected in 30 minutes or forfeit $25. O. W. Roberts will referee the bouts. A big attendance, it was said, will help the athletic club clear up its debts and enable Bismarck to have good baseball this summer.

Leonard to Battle Freezmann in Bout

Chicago, April 6.—Sailor Freezmann, Chicago, lightweight, will enter the squared circle with Benny Leonard, world champion lightweight in a titular match of 15 rounds at the polo grounds in New York July 2, it became known here today. Freezmann said he had signed articles for the match and posted $2,500 to make the required 135, eight hours before the bout.

Albania Shuns Turkey; Turns Toward West

Tirana, Albania, April 6.—Little Albania, with her narrow strip of mountainous territory and her scant one million people, rebels against paying any of the debt of Turkey for the reason that the former Ottoman Empire, after collecting its tribute here, never so much as built a bridge, constructed a road, or erected a school, according to members of the newly constituted Albanian parliament, which has been meeting in laborious sittings since the New Year. The sum assigned to Albania for payment was 750,000 gold francs, or about $150,000, but this sum, the deputies say, would mean a very serious drain on the public finances. Albania is still the wild and undeveloped country she has always been—without a mile of railroad, almost impassable roads and but one or two schools at most. The government, constituted on the order of a republic, is holding every effort to collect sufficient revenue to meet the annual expenditures, figured at 18,000,000 gold francs, or about $3,600,000, which represents but a fraction of what the United States government spends in a single day. Though there is a great deal of Turkish influence left in this small and primitive country, the present tendency is to throw off all of the Ottoman bonds and lean toward Western civilization. Instead of sending their sons to Constantinople for their professional training, the well-to-do now send them to Paris, London and Rome. Even in dress the tendency is to turn to the West for leadership. The tiny capital, located here, is now putting on the airs of its mission by the establishment of legations and consulates. Both England and America maintain legations here, while Italy is represented by a consulate.

The boxing itself isn't of the caliber to become madly excited about, in fact, it is rather second-class. This is due, of course, to the municipal ruling which permits amateur bouts only. So that the boys who mix it are unknown outside of Cleveland. But aside from that—caramba! Public Hall is one of the biggest things of its kind. At one far corner is a magnificent stage, a really huge thing. Here a jazz band plays. The floor, with the ring in the center, is immense, and above its sides and rear rise in graceful loops a majestic balcony, so spacious that the corners, when you look are almost lost in shadows. The entire auditorium is said to seat 15,000. No smoking is permitted, and a liberal supply of bluecoats are on hand to enforce the ruling. Very little of the usual yelling, so closely associated with boxing matches, is to be heard. Spectators vent their passions with mild hand-clapping. It is as easy to get your correct seat at one of these shows—and any prize fight fan will appreciate this—as it is at any legitimate theatrical production. In other words, Cleveland now has the best hall for boxing matches, and the best manner of handling them of any city in the country, those who have been there declare.

Despite the flu, boils, troublesome ankles and now a law suit Babe Ruth manages to get a lot of fun out of swatting the pill. Here's the latest photo of the Yankee star at the New Orleans training camp.

BANDITS MAKE BIG HAUL IN BANK ROBBERY

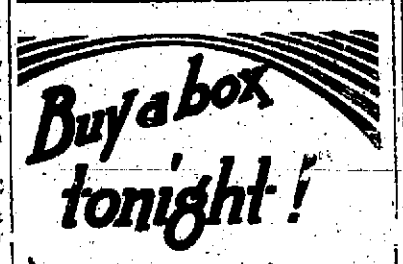

St. Louis, April 6.—Registered bonds of the St. Joseph Federal Land Bank amounting to $2,139,000 were in the loot obtained by five bandits who last Monday morning held up a mail truck in the heart of the down town business section according to information obtained this afternoon by the St. Louis Post Dispatch. The bonds printed in Washington were sent to banks here. They lacked the signature of the vice president and secretary of the bank, but the authorities thought the bandits would forge the signature, the Dispatch said. A total of other bonds taken it was learned by the Post Dispatch was $225,000 of which $81,250 at least were negotiable.

KLAN AFFAIRS IN UNCERTAIN STATUS

Atlanta, Ga., April 6.—Internal affairs of the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan continued in uncertain status while the court of Judge E. D. Thomas was occupied with arguments of the counsel on the order of Judge Thomas that W. J. Simmons, emperor of the Klan, called, by injunction brought by him and his supporters last Monday should not be dismissed. The injunction sought to displace Dr. Wm. Evans from office of imperial wizard, executive head of the organization.

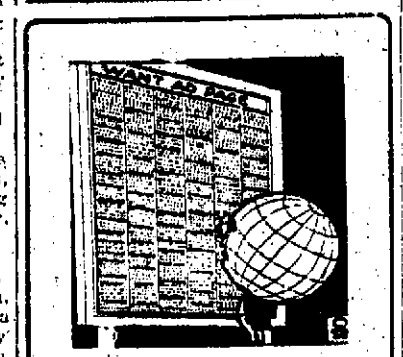

EPISCOPAL BISHOP TAKES BAD TURN

St. Louis, April 6.—A slight turn for the worse was reported today in the condition of the Rt. Rev. Daniel S. Cutler, presiding bishop of the Episcopal church in the United States. He is suffering from grippe. He has the use of his faculties when awake and converses briefly with those about his bedside.

ALASKA

You have never seen anything like it. It "gets into your blood." The mystery, the vastness, the "Great White Silence" of this Northland, gorgeous with flowers during the Midnight Sun. It gives you an appreciation of contrasts—egg-sac swabberies, beside glaciers, luxuriant roses at the feet of totem poles. Great gold mines with modern machinery near fishing towns unchanged since Russia sold Alaska to the United States. Come this summer on one of the palatial Canadian Pacific Princess ships. More Light--- Better Business For the Publisher

THE more light the publisher gives the advertiser on his publication—the greater consideration he receives when it comes to placing advertising.

The facts embodied in an A. B. C. report are those which the advertiser wants to know—facts that he must know to buy space intelligently. He cannot afford the time or expense necessary to collect them either by correspondence with the publisher or by financing his own investigation.

Therefore, the uniform, easily-accessible A. B. C. form, packed with complete dependable facts, is a ready solution to the problem of how to locate the most desirable mediums with the minimum of effort and expense.

The long-established commercial rating agencies have furnished financial information for years. Banks are audited periodically. The Audit Bureau of Circulations performs a similar function by collecting and verifying circulation information for the advertiser.

Publishers subscribing to the A. B. C. standards are helping to stabilize and organize advertising in the way that, by long experience in other commercial lines, has proved to be Good Business.

The Tribune is a member of the A. B. C. and would be pleased to submit a copy of the latest circulation report.
